About Cockayne

Cockayne is a private foundation based in San Francisco and one of the successor foundations of Columbia Foundation, a ground-breaking philanthropic foundation founded along enlightened principles in 1940 by Madeleine Haas Russell, mother of the current President of Cockayne and her brother, William Haas. True to Madeleine Haas Russell's belief that young people can best discern the priorities of their time, in 2013 Columbia Foundation's assets were divided between three successor family foundations designed to involve the next generations in giving. Cockayne is committed to carrying forward Columbia Foundation's commitment to make a difference for the good with special focus on how this is achievable in the arts.

Cockayne – Grants for the Arts is a donor-advised fund of The London Community Foundation.

Guidelines

The goal is to support art as a way of enriching life experience.

Grant making is focused on arts projects in London that provide opportunities to artists from diverse cultures for the creation, development, performance, or exhibition in the performing (music, opera, dance, theatre) literary, or visual arts.

Current priorities are:

1. New work or ground-breaking re-interpretations of classic repertoire that demonstrate the potential: for artistic excellence, to reach large and diverse audiences, and/or to make a significant, new contribution to the art form.
2. Art that is experimental, risk-taking, and/or engages controversial issues.
3. Projects that involve young artists.

Please note: Arts projects that are primarily focused on social/political advocacy, community arts and arts-education programmes are not a funding priority of Cockayne - Grants for the Arts. We do not fund digital arts projects or films, including the filming of productions.

Please do not apply if your project falls into one of these categories.

Grant size

- Average grants range from £1,000 to £25,000, with a few exceptional projects being considered at a higher level.
- Applicants should not apply for more than 20% of their overall project budget and must demonstrate clearly how additional funds for the project are to be raised.
- Capital campaigns are rarely considered and only when improvement of the home of an arts organisation is its highest priority. Capital-campaign grants tend to be considered in the same range as programme grants.
- Multi-year grant applications are not encouraged and are considered only very occasionally.

Geographic priority

Applicants must either be based in London, or delivering the proposed work in London.

Not for profit status requirement

Cockayne – Grants for the Arts only considers applications from organisations which are registered charities. Cockayne – Grants for the Arts does not consider letters of inquiry from for-profit organisations or individuals.

Annual deadline for applications

Please note – the deadline for applications is December 19th 2017 (a different closing date from previous years.)

Tuesday December 19th at 12pm, 2017, submitted via an online application.

Please note that applications submitted by 12pm on December 19th 2017 deadline should be for projects scheduled to begin no sooner than the following July. Please see the instructions below on how to submit your online application.

Our reach

Thanks to the generosity of our supporters, we have invested over £15 million into charitable projects across the capital during the last three years, improving the lives of over 300,000 Londoners. We support a wide range of charities and community groups across London, enabling a number of different organisations and projects to achieve impact. We specialise in finding and funding smaller organisations that do not attract mass public support, or who are at an early stage in their development.

Cockayne Grants for the Arts initiated grants

Cockayne – Grants for the Arts uses a portion of its resources to fund in fields of interest not currently emphasized in its guidelines. These grants may grow into formal parts of the foundation's program in the future or they may be single, one-time grants. Because these grants are initiated by members of the foundation's board of directors or staff, unsolicited letters of inquiry for programmes outside of the foundation's current guidelines are not considered.

Screening procedures

Cockayne – Grants for the Arts receives many more applications than it can fund each year. Although many applications merit support and fall within guidelines, Cockayne - Grants for the Arts is able to fund less than one-in-ten applications. A four-stage review process follows the Cockayne – Grants for the Arts programme application deadline:

1. staff review of applications
2. review and discussion by Cockayne Board and arts committee
3. staff discussions with the Cockayne Board; and
4. Cockayne – Grants for the Arts final decisions by The London Community Foundation (LCF) approximately four months after the programme deadline, with grant decisions being announced publically mid-late May.

Review of applications

The following questions are also among those considered when reviewing an application for a grant:

1. Benefit – Will the project help the applicant/ organisation grow artistically/ organisationally?
2. Leadership – Who are the project leaders? Success is largely due to the competence, creativity, experience, dedication, and energy of the leaders of the organisations/projects.
3. Cost – What is the cost of the project? Is it sustainable and reasonable in relationship to the overall budget and promised benefits/outcomes?
4. Time frame – Is it realistic and achievable?
5. Likelihood of success – are objectives sustainable? What is the probability that the project will be achieved as described?
6. Urgency – Is the issue urgent, requiring attention on a timely basis; are there special conditions now that increase/decrease the likelihood of success?
7. Need – Does the applicant organisation need Cockayne – Grants for the Arts funding, or is it probable it could secure funding elsewhere?

Reporting requirements

All grantees of Cockayne – Grants for the Arts must provide a report detailing the progress and results of their program as described in their grant proposal. Cockayne is most interested in learning what a grantee thinks is the impact and artistic/ public benefit to date and how the grantee ascertains the results. These reports must provide the following:

1. Narrative summary of the progress that the grantee has made towards achieving the purposes for which the grant was made, which should specifically address the goals, methods/strategies, and evaluation/assessment plan outlined in grantee's original proposal to Cockayne – Grants for the Arts, and any changes thereto.
2. Two copies of any publications or products resulting from the grant.
3. Statement of grantee's compliance with the terms of the grant.
4. Separate financial report for the project showing a comparison between budgeted income and expenses, and actual income by source (list each foundation grant and amount separately) and actual expenses.
5. Separate financial report for the grantee's entire organisation for the current and previous fiscal year, showing a comparison between budgeted income and expenses, and actual income by source (list each foundation grant and amount separately) and actual expenses.
6. For multi-year grants:
 - a. Project and organisational budget for the upcoming fiscal year.
 - b. Summary of funds secured and pending (list each foundation grant and amount separately) for the upcoming fiscal year, including time period covered, for the project and organisation respectively.
 - c. Narrative description of the project or program plans for the upcoming fiscal year.

7. The London Community Foundation would also like you to provide information regarding
 - a. How many people benefitted from the funded work?
 - b. Where the majority of the beneficiaries were (region/borough/town)?
 - c. How the grant impacted your organisation? Did it help leverage any additional funds?

Reports should be forwarded by email to monitoring@londoncf.org.uk and cc'd to Jo Hedley, Executive Director of Cockayne, at cockayne100@gmail.com. Any publications/ products resulting from the grant and any additional information requested in hard copy should be sent by post to The London Community Foundation, Unit 1.04, Piano House, 9 Brighton Terrace, London SW9 8DJ
